

ESRC Behaviour Change Seminar Seven: Changing Behaviour Around Online Security and Privacy

"These seminars continue to be a vitally important forum for critical discussion about 'behaviour change' within various academic and policy agendas. The quality of speaker presentations is excellent, and delegates are reporting after each session that they feel inspired and enthused."

Dr Fiona Spotswood, Seminar Lead (UWE)

Join us for the seventh in this series of seminars on the subject of online security and privacy 'behaviour change'. Delegates are invited to explore research, policy and practice in this fascinating and tangled area. The internet offers a world of opportunity for behaviour change but also a vehicle for damaging threats to privacy and security in various forms. Understanding how people interact with each other and non-humans online is paramount. The day promises to feature some lively discussion as delegates listen to presentations from a range of experts in the field.

Confirmed speakers:

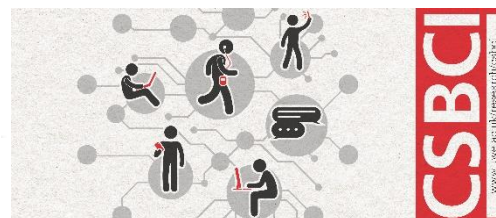

- Professor Adam Joinson, Professor of Information Systems, University of Bath
- Professor Alessandro Acquisti, Professor of Information Technology and Public Policy, Heinz College, Carnegie Mellon University
- Dr Debi Ashenden, Reader in Cyber Security, Centre for Cyber Security & Information Systems
- Professor Angela Sasse, Director of the UK Research Institute in Science of Cyber Security (RISCS)
- Professor Ian Brown, Professor of Information Security and Privacy, Oxford Internet Institute
- Professor Sabine Trepte, Professor of Media Psychology, University of Hohenheim

Admission is FREE, but places are limited. Please note that due to the popularity of this event tickets are currently limited to one per customer.
