Get ready for BSc(Hons) Criminology with Psychology

What is crime? How do we define 'crime'? Who are the 'typical' criminals? Who is most likely to be a victim of crime? How much crime is there? What types of crime occur most frequently? How can we try to prevent crime? These are some of the key questions that are crucial to understanding crime, and that we will be exploring as part of your BSc(Hons) Criminology with Psychology. As your Programme Leader, I warmly welcome you, and hope you are looking forward to joining us at UWE Bristol.

I have provided some information below that will help you to prepare for starting with us and I very much look forward to meeting you soon!

Paul Gavin
Programme Leader

Before you start

We are looking forward to welcoming you in the week commencing 14 September for Starting Block and the beginning of your programme.

Starting Block will help you settle into university and help you get to know your teaching team and course mates. We will help you find your way around, get used to our systems, and practise the skills you need to make a strong start. Look out for further emails and explore the Starting Block website with more details.

Your timetable will be available to you via MYUWE (login required) once you have started the enrolment process. Please visit the 'Understanding your teaching timetable' website to find out when your timetable will be published.

Engage with your programme

Start your learning
Don't wait until the Autumn, start thinking about some of the central themes that underpin criminology and your degree programme now!

Obviously, crime, criminality and victimisation are all impacted by social context, and this has been particularly evident over the last few years, from the impact of Covid-19 and periods of lockdown, questions about race and gender in policing with the murder of George Floyd in the US and Sarah Everard in the UK, through to changes of government, both here and in the US. Whilst crime rates overall dramatically decreased during periods of lockdown (see: Dodd's article in the Guardian here), some offences saw sharp increases – such as domestic violence and domestic homicide. A good starting point in helping us understand why this might be is Farrell and Tilley's (2020) short article in The Conversation. More locally, the toppling of the Colston Statue in Bristol city centre gave us lots to think about in terms of who is a criminal and why.

Of course, the pandemic also had a significant impact on people's mental health and has had a number of psychological impacts. Studying Criminology with Psychology is a great way to see how these two different areas interact, and what effect that has on us as individuals and on the society in which we live.

So, as you start to prepare to join us at UWE Bristol, I would recommend you have a look at the following:

- Keep abreast of the news! Locally, nationally and internationally. Check the headlines daily and use a reputable news source, such as the BBC website, rather than relying on an algorithm to send updates to your phone.

- Update your Facebook feeds and Twitter/X accounts! So that you are following relevant criminal justice organisations and agencies (such as: Prison Reform Trust, Howard League, Centre for Crime and Justice, Ministry of Justice), news sources (such as: The Guardian, BBC News) public figures (such as politicians and social commentators) and keeping yourself informed of criminal justice matters. If you are relatively new to Twitter, a good tip is to see who others (e.g. other Criminologists) are following, particularly if they share your own particular areas of interest. You can also follow the us on Instagram @UWECriminologyCommunity as well as our Criminology Society - @uwecrimsociety and our psychology colleagues @uwepsychology

- Start reading! When you embark on a criminology degree you will be required to read a lot. There is evidence that suggests reading speed improves and increases when we practice reading. It is argued that reading anything, will help with this. If you cannot remember the last time you read a book, a novel, a biography, an autobiography or even a full length article from a quality newspaper, it is suggested you should do so. Remember that simply reading soundbites from social media is no preparation for the text books, articles and reports you will be expected to read, so try to get into the habit of sustained periods of reading now. Try some of these for starters:

Frances Crook (2019) Homelessness and the Penal System

REPORT: Ben Bradford and Matteo Tiratelli (2019) Does stop and search reduce crime?

NEWS ARTICLE: It was so wrong- why were so many people imprisoned over 1 riot in Bristol (Tom Wall, 2024).

Laura Bates (2020) writing about incel culture in Elle

AUTOBIGRAPHY: Bryan Stevenson (2014) Just Mercy
SPEECH:

NOVEL: Moses McKenzie (2022) An Olive Grove in Ends and Emily Koch (2020) Keep Him Close These two books are set in Bristol, and feature people engaging with the Criminal Justice System in various ways!David Lammy (2017) Justice for All

NOVEL: Moses McKenzie (2022) An Olive Grove in Ends and Emily Koch (2020) Keep Him Close These two books are set in Bristol, and feature people engaging with the Criminal Justice System in various ways!

- Further insight into many of the issues studied in your lectures, seminars and one-to-one tutorials can be found on the Centre for Crime and Justice Studies website. You can also find an insightful edition of the Centre's publication here which covers a range of topics that have become areas of concern over the last quarter of a century.

Read around your subject

A key skill which is required for those aiming for a high level of success within their chosen profession is the ability to think critically about key issues and debates. In order to develop these skills, you should start to read around your subject before you arrive. In preparation for study, we encourage you to read broadly, choosing books and subjects that will interest you. There are some texts which are considered to be 'classics' for those about to study criminology and many of these 'classic' texts are available to purchase second hand or to borrow through libraries. The following are suggestions that will be particularly relevant to the first year of your studies (and beyond) but this is not an exhaustive list, just some ideas. Hopefully, they will generate some more for you!

- Newburn, T. (2017). Criminology (3rd Ed). London and New York: Routledge. (If you are going to buy one book for Crim, this is a good one!)
- Many of the Psychology readings are available on this platform: Intro to Psych
- Carrabine, E., Cox, A., Cox, P., Crowhurst, I., Di Ronco, A., Fussey, P., Sergi, A., South, N., Thiel, D. and Turton, J., (2020). Criminology: A Sociological Introduction

(3rd Ed). London: Routledge.

- Davies, M., Croall, H. and Tyrer, J. (2015). Criminal Justice (5th Ed). Harlow: Longman.
- Jones, S. (2021). Criminology (7th Ed). Oxford: Oxford University Press.
- McLaughlin, M. and Muncie, J. (2019). The Sage Dictionary of Criminology (4th Ed). London: Sage.
- Young, J. (2011). The Criminolological Imagination, London: Polity.
- Liebling, A., Maruna, S. and McAra, L. (eds) (2017). The Oxford Handbook of Criminology (6th Edition). Oxford: Oxford University Press.

University life
There are a huge number of books on university life as well as good study techniques, including:

- Hooper, N. (2021). The Unbreakable Student London: Robinson (Nic is an ex UWE Lecturer!)
- Chatfield, T. (2022). Critical Thinking: Your Guide to Effective Argument, Successful Analysis and Independent Study (2nd Ed). London: Sage.
